

From: Trevor Milevskiy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/23/01 10:24am
Subject: Antitrust deal

I have read through the internet that one of the agreements was to make microsoft give equipment and software to poorer schools. While this may seem a good idea on the surface, it is actually a way to increase microsoft's dominance in the computer industry by locking these poorer schools into the microsoft systems so that they will have to purchase upgrades etc from this company. Wouldn't it be a far better idea to give the schools the money so that they can decide how they will spend it. Some may need to use this money for other technological equipment like TV's Videos and Overhead Projectors to name a few.

Thankyou

Do You Yahoo!?
Get your free @yahoo.com address at <http://mail.yahoo.com>